I want to set the process title of my console application in the attach to process dialog of visual studio.
I tried to set the assembly name, process description, etc.. but it didn't work.

How can I achieve this in C#?

c# visual-studio process set title

I believe the title will come from the mainwindowhandle's title. Do you have a form? – Ctznkane525 Jan 2 '18 at 16:08

No I want to set this title in a C# console application. – Antoine Jan 2 '18 at 16:09

Console.Title = "Your title here";

This change the console window title, but the process title in the attach to process dialog is still blank. – Antoine Jan 2 '18 at 16:46

@AntoineLafarge Is your project a Console Application? How are you launching it? – Mateusz Krzaczek Jan 2 '18 at 16:53

Okay it works when I launch the binary from the explorer, but it does not work when I use the Visual Studio ctrl + F5 shortcut. – Antoine Jan 2 '18 at 16:55

Since this is for debugging, open a new blank form at to of program and close it at end...that'll work...I'll see if there's another idea
If there's no form, process.mainwindowtitle is blank

Opening a dummy form will have to do, process.mainwindowtitle will be blank if there's no visible form – Ctnkane525 Jan 2 '18 at 16:23

Yes when I create a new form application, the title is the form window title. – Antoine Jan 2 '18 at 16:33

Then there's your answer 😊 – Ctnkane525 Jan 2 '18 at 16:34

But I want to achieve this on a console application. Do you know how the form is changing this title? – Antoine Jan 2 '18 at 16:35
